Contract Bridge by Jewel Gray

Will you please explain the redouble of a take-out double in your column. Also give the requirements for this bid.—N. W.

Redouble

If your partner opens the bidding and second hand doubles, if you hold 21-2 honor tricks you should redouble. Two honor tricks with good distribution will suffice for a redouble. This redouble does not necessarily guarantee any trump support in the partner's bid suit.

The redouble of a take-out double shows the balance of honor strength, and therefore the partner of the doubler must hold practically a blank hand. A redouble informs partner that the hand is fairly strong in honors and asks him to either double the adverse bid if holding a trump trick or to pass up the bid to the redoubler so as to give him an opportunity to consider, in turn, a double for penalties. The redoubler practically guarantees to take some action other than a pass when the bidding comes around to him again. If the opponent bids a suit and you have a trump trick you may double for a penalty set, if you can not double pass so that your partner may have a chance to double, which he will if he holds a trump trick in the opponent's bid suit. Large penalty sets are made this way.

For example:

S—A Q x x
H—Q J 10 6
D—A x x
C—x x

S—K J x x
H—A x x x
D—Q x x
C—A x

N W E S

S—x x
H—K x x x
D—K J 10
C—K Q x x

S—x x x
H—x
D—x x x x
C—x x x x x

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1NT	Dbl	Redbl

No matter what bid is made by North or South the combined hands will be doubled and heavily penalized.
