2 Returning G. I.'s Steal Show

By ROBERT HEILMAN

Larry Snyder and Jim Glessner stole the show at the Seattle Port of Embarkation this forenoon without half trying—without trying at ALL.

Uncle Samuel, vice president in charge of returning dogfaces, knows them a little differently, namely:

Sergt. Larry J. Snyder, 2115 S. W. 174th St.

Pvt. Jim I. Glessner, 12092 44th Place S.

There were 3,270 Army officers and men aboard the Navy transport Marine Serpent when she tied up, but the two South Enders got the most attention the quickest.

Great Collection of Signs

There were 11 squirming, weeping, jumping human beings on hand to welcome Larry, and they carried the greatest collection of signs on the pier.

Likewise, there were 11 jiggling, crying, craning men, women and children to welcome Jim, and they carried the BIGGEST sign on the pier.

It was hardly any wonder all eyes seemed to focus on Larry and Jim. They are both 22. They took their training together. They saw much of one another overseas. They both like kissing and they both are tickled pink at the prospect of getting out of the service, real SOON!

For Larry, this was less the Port of Embarkation than a large slice of paradise. There stood his girl, Jean Wilson; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin C. Snyder; his brothers, sister, grandfather, cousin and friends.

Seventeen months overseas were just over for Larry Snyder, who was graduated from Highline High School in 1950.

Just a Few Words

When all the hugging and kissing were over, and the myriad signs allowed to sink to the pier, Larry had a few words to say about life and love, but only a few:

"Yes, sir, I'm gonna get out of uniform. My girl looks good to me; very, very good!"

Not a dozen feet away stood Jim Glessner, who used to attend Foster High School.

Jim squeezed and was squeezed by his mother and dad, Mr. and Mrs. George Glessner; his sisters, sisters-in-law, nieces and neighbors, who took turns at holding high a huge banner bidding him welcome.

Seventeen months away was plenty for Jim Glessner.

There was no fiancee to meet Jim Glessner, but he had plans.

"I've got a girl," he said, adding, "lots of 'em."

"Get out your little black book," murmured his mother.

The lad was home, all right, all right.

Death Takes Florida G.O.P. Candidate

TAMPA, Fla., Oct. 25.—(AP)—Death has removed J. Tom Watson, 68, from the stormy Florida political scene.

A former state attorney-general who was running as the Republican candidate for governor after two unsuccessful attempts to gain the Democratic nomination, Watson died of heart disease yesterday.

His successor in the governor's race has not been selected.

The fiery lawyer, a staunch champion of states' rights, broke with the Democratic Party in 1948, after more than 20 years, and registered as an independent.

Watson joined the Republican Party two years ago.

Watson opposed the United States Supreme Court ruling against segregation and pledged that if elected he would see that segregation remained in Florida schools.

Union Steward Speaks Out Against Proposition 5
"Sure I'm against Proposition 5, which would double Seattle's business tax," says Pual R. Jellen, Shop Steward, Local 383, Sheet Metal Workers, who works at Steel Products Incorporated.
"I know darn well that a tax increase like this will make it mighty tough for industries like ours to compete with California and eastern cities. I've got a family of four to feed. I don't like the idea of my job being threatened. That's why I'm voting against Proposition 5.'
